

Message 03 (February 2025)

A fundamental difference between book authors, writers and messengers.

The language of the spirit of love is a serious but gentle language, without coercion or threats.

Conversion of the original two-phase cosmic energy into single-phase energy, comparable to direct current and alternating current

Human beings do not depend solely on food for energy.

How bipolar energy affects the human organism and how psychic and human vibrations can be increased, not only through meditation.

Why children can also be integrated into the way of life of kind and God-fearing people (their parents).

From the inexhaustible source of God's love for you, kind, God-connected and spiritually seeking people.

In the fullness of its divine love, the divine has always strived, strives and will always strive to give life advice to people who take their lives seriously, who want to mature spiritually and profoundly expand their consciousness. Since time immemorial, the divine has strived to communicate with people in the essence of all that exists.

It has never been, is not, and will never be easy to convey messages or advice to people from the source of love. There are many reasons for this. There is a fundamental difference between book authors, writers, and messengers of God, who think freely and strive to convey messages to people exclusively through divine inspiration, through the transmission of images. This does not make them superhuman or saints, who do not exist, never have existed and never will exist. The so-called Book of Books was written by humans and contains many messages. Understand that there can be no absolute truth. It exists in the subtle world of eternal peace, through humility, modesty and equality. These form the basis for maturing into a considerable expansion of consciousness. Divine communications in the form of messages are offered by the deity with love. The divine would never impose itself on human beings. In the 'language of God' one never finds threats of eternal punishment or teachings of any kind. He does not communicate with benevolent people through threatening gestures and thunderclaps, as the Book of Books would have us believe. The divine language, which comes from the essence of every being, from the original source of his inexhaustible love, is admonishing and serious, but never threatening or frightening. God respects the unshakeable free will of every human being, even if it pains him to see how living conditions on Earth are deteriorating and becoming increasingly threatening for humans. These threatening and chaotic conditions are due to a sharp drop in energy in the cosmos, but especially on planet Earth. This can be explained by the fact that God is NOT the creator of the visible cosmos and therefore also not of planet Earth. He would never want to do such a thing to human beings. However, the amount of energy allocated to the fallen beings is slowly coming to an end.

However, it was always agreed that the fallen beings and the humans influenced by them would never tolerate interference in developments on Earth. This was the agreement made before the Big Bang and thus before the creation of the visible universe from dense matter. However, kind, honest, benevolent, sincere and truth-seeking people have always had the opportunity to establish an intimate and heartfelt connection to the loving deity and to Christ, the original brother of all brothers, through the heart of the soul, the core of being and life. Through this, energies flow from the original source into the soul, the light body. The spirit of love would never impose its will on people or try to manipulate them. That would not be in keeping with the gentle and humble nature of God.

The spirit of love understands that some readers will reject these messages by shaking their heads or even reacting with inner anger. It is therefore advisable not to read these texts too early if the soul is not yet ready for them. On the contrary, this could lead to disagreements and discomfort. Therefore, it is advisable that people who are sincerely seeking first ask the dear God to open their hearts to understanding. The author of these messages is not acting in his own interest. Nor is it his intention to compile these messages into a book and make money from them. What comes from the divine source is an offer to sincere, benevolent and honest people who have a deep desire to mature spiritually and expand their consciousness. Life in the physical body is limited on this planet, and after death, the soul will inevitably leave the physical body to return to eternity.

Dear people, the situation on planet Earth is becoming increasingly chaotic. It cannot be hidden that the planet is suffering greatly from the decline in life energy. The divine energy that comes from the original central sun of the invisible universe is an energy that creates and sustains life. But after it concentrated into a tiny particle of energy and after the first spark that created the visible universe, this energy has continued to diminish. Planet Earth is also suffering greatly from this lack of energy.

But why is this so? The entire visible cosmos was built by converting bipolar, i.e. two-phase energy into single-phase energy. This simply means that the free flow of energy to the original central sun no longer functions adequately. However, it is becoming increasingly depleted, and no new energy is coming from the original central sun to renew it. This is comparable to direct current and alternating current. While direct current gradually weakens on its way and only flows in one direction, alternating current flows periodically in different directions without losing power and supplies households with electricity. This is exactly what happens with the energy supply to humans.

Human life energy is not based solely on nutrition. Many people try to supply their cells with sufficient life energy through a balanced and healthy diet. They strive for a healthy diet, which is good and sensible in order to provide the body with sufficient nutrients, trace elements and vitamins. To do this, humans must also breathe in oxygen, which is essential for maintaining the human body. But humans are by no means supplied with energy in this way alone; they also need invisible energies that build and sustain life, the two-phase energies that originate from the original central sun. These energies cause the seven energy centres of the human being to rotate at an accelerated rate, which leads to an increased vibration of the soul in the physical body. This increased vibration gradually releases energy that circulates in the physical body in the opposite direction, from the head to the feet and vice versa. This creates an energetic field of tension that supplies all the cells of the body with energy. It ensures that the cells of each organ, with their different functions and tasks, can perform them without any problems. If this life energy decreases, the cell gradually weakens and, unfortunately, can no longer perform its function adequately. The consequences are organic dysfunctions and even serious illnesses, as you unfortunately already know. Therefore, the treatment of cancer must not be limited to the destruction of diseased cells that no longer fulfil their original function, but must also take into account the strengthening of the cells in the surrounding area that are still sufficiently healthy. These cells would then be able to signal the diseased cells that they are malfunctioning or, if they do not respond, destroy them and thus eliminate them.

This would improve the condition of the diseased organ. These measures should be taken in addition to all medical treatments.

Many deep-thinking people have discovered for themselves that meditation gives them special powers that bring them inner peace, serenity and balance. That is a good thing. Through meditation, they come into close contact with the original cosmic forces that penetrate their soul and thus their body. They then feel comfortable and balanced. This leads to an increase in vibrations due to increased rotation of the energy particles in the chakras. When these energy particles, which function dualistically, slow down, the vibrations decrease and the person feels tired, listless and depressed and may even develop depression. This is very unfortunate and tragic.

The increase in vibration intensifies when the energy generated by the increased rotation of the energy particles can circulate freely, i.e. not only in the form of a tension energy field in and around the body, but also through the free return to the original central sun. But meditation is not the only option. The spirit of love offers people seeking healing the opportunity to connect with it intimately and warmly through the heart and the essence of the soul. Please understand that this has nothing to do with pious prayers recited like a litany, but is a sincere, honest, humble, modest and impersonal connection with God. You will then feel the energy centres spinning faster and faster, and you will experience a pleasant feeling of peace and inner calm radiating from your head to your feet. You will experience an indescribable feeling of happiness. If you do this more often, the cells of your body will feel it and thank you with a pleasant tingling sensation. This will strengthen their functions and enable them to perform their actual tasks much better, preventing the occurrence of all kinds of diseases. You yourself will notice that children and young people are increasingly suffering from the consequences of the chaotic events that are shaking the world and are seeking help without knowing where to turn.

This is an alarm signal that is directed in particular at parents and their children. The world is increasingly dominated by negative energies. Power-hungry people, who are unfortunately themselves victims of the influence of souls bound to the Earth, cause much suffering on planet Earth through their hunger for power and their need for recognition. Their sphere of influence now also extends to the internet, regardless of how they use it. They can only maintain their position of power thanks to the energy of benevolent and honest people. They literally suck the energy out of them, which encourages them in their actions. But the souls who are exploited in this way feel increasingly weakened, tired and exhausted. Thanks to the messages conveyed by the deity, the spirit of love, honest people can rise spiritually and their souls can reach unimagined depths of knowledge, maturity and consciousness. These messages are spreading very slowly, but they are positive, invigorating and constructive. In contrast, the negative forces emanating from the powerful and rulers of this earth cannot bear this truth, as it causes dissatisfaction and discomfort within them. They cannot connect internally with such messages, which are repugnant to them. This fact is, unfortunately, very sad. You can see this in the destructive and devastating wars caused by humans. Just as their energies are negatively polarised, so are their effects in terms of their destructive and devastating weapons of all kinds. These spread through sudden explosions with destructive waves to kill everything that stands in their way. Just as the primitive bipolar energies, summarised in tiny elementary particles, brought forth visible creation in the original explosion, the Big Bang, the effects of these explosive negative energies are just as destructive. They are neither constructive nor vital, but only bring misery, death and destruction. Can you see the difference? Can you already recognise the energies you are dealing with and the difference between their origin and their mode of action? Hence the appeal of the Spirit of Love to young parents and their children: take this seriously and offer your children what will accompany them on their life's journey with peace and security. Offer them the opportunity to walk their path on planet Earth with kindness, gentleness, modesty, humility and in the equality of all people. Your children can have the same experiences with the beloved divinity as you, and your efforts will be rewarded, not with holy words, but you and your children will enjoy special protection from the beings of light of the divine love union, who willingly and selflessly take on their protective role to ensure your safety. This requires no temples, no churches, no stern sermons, and no pious worship of God or Christ, our original brother among all brothers. Never has the deity, in its infinite mercy, understanding, and love, caused or ordered wars. NO, that is not the nature of God, but mercy, gentleness and equality among all beings. There is no need for pious words, worship of the cross, moral sermons or threats, as are unfortunately uttered by religious leaders. In the love of God there is no religious fanaticism, no severity, no resort to violence; there cannot be. These means are used to maintain power over others and to freeze them in unchanging traditions that ultimately lead them nowhere. On the contrary, they also leave a trail of destruction and devastation. Understand the difference. Take this seriously so that you may return with joy to the heaven of God's eternal love. These are not empty promises, but the sole goal in the lives of those who strive to mature spiritually and emotionally and to be a spiritual support to their fellow human beings on their journey through life. They shine in the rainbow colours of their soul and spread peace, gentleness and understanding around them. They do not condemn people who do evil, but they abhor their evil deeds. Never forget that everything will be returned to the heaven of eternal love and equality of all beings. No one will be above anyone else, and there will be no more kings, church leaders, priests or religious leaders. There will be harmony of love, equality and other spiritual creations. You will be guided by a continuous expansion of knowledge to knowledge. Understanding the meaning of the messages.

How the prophets of the past adapted to their time in order to communicate

What invisible processes take place during dying.

How doctors and nursing staff can help the dying, including in palliative care.

How family members and friends of the dying can accompany them through their presence

The Spirit of Love greets you, who are loving and peaceful people. The Spirit of Love would like to give you a message from its inexhaustible source of love, which you may or may not read according to your human will. Never has the Deity, in its incomparable understanding of human beings, imposed its will on them. However, it gives them loving, serious warnings and divine guidance. Therefore, the Spirit of Love, as God, advises you to pray sincerely to Him while reading these messages, so that He may help you to understand the connections in their proper perspective. He understands perfectly well that you are finding it difficult to read these texts at the moment. Please understand that there will be no absolute truth. These messages were written by human hands and are therefore not free from error. However, the reader should not use spelling or word choice as a guide to understanding these writings, but rather grasp the meaning behind the words. Human vocabulary will never be sufficient to express what comes to us from the source of love of eternal divinity. The prophets of old could only use words that could be understood in their time by people who tried to receive them with a certain seriousness. The profound understanding required to explain certain processes or events was very limited, which is why many ancient texts sometimes seem incomprehensible and inaccessible to the human mind. However, this does not mean that they are false or subject to human error. One must always take into account the time at which they were written. Likewise, one must always consider the meaning of the messages at the time they were conveyed. Many readers of these texts will rightly ask themselves how a person can presume to believe that what he writes comes from the source of God's love. It seems rather presumptuous to publish such writings. This consideration is entirely human and understandable from a divine perspective. The life of a messenger who, inspired by God and through the transmission of images, attempts to put what he has received into human words is not easy. Above all, he is not infallible and is a human being like everyone else, with his obligations and daily concerns. There is always a great risk that souls connected to the Earth will interfere and try to contribute their thoughts and desires. However, these do not originate from the divine source of love and are therefore powerless and incapable of helping benevolent people who sincerely seek divine knowledge on their difficult path. They do not lead to a profound expansion of consciousness. Self-knowledge is sometimes painful and shows people what life on this planet really is. The Earth is not the final abode of the soul incarnated in a human body. The Earth was never created by God, and man is not the crowning glory of creation. Due to his profession, the author of these messages has seen many people die and has thus gained a wealth of experience. Writing books on this subject to help people better understand the process of dying would have been one way to pass on his experiences, but there is already enough literature on this subject. However, there are inner processes taking place that are not visible to the naked eye. Nevertheless, every human being should be aware that their time on Earth is limited. The process of dying and thus the separation of body and soul affects children as well as young people and the elderly. This is a sad reality that will never change.

No one can escape it. The causes are manifold: illness, armed conflicts of all kinds, acts of violence, natural disasters, accidents, etc. The author of this message worked in palliative care for 20 years and yet was unable to fully understand many processes. He is therefore all the more grateful for the following message, which was previously unknown to him: at death, the soul incarnated in the human body separates from the earthly world to pass into the afterlife. Wealthy people, kings, the rich with their possessions, church leaders, authorities and politicians are subject to the same laws of life. Nothing remains of their former glory, reputation and prestige in the afterlife. Their souls are so burdened by their exploitative and selfish way of life that they will find it very difficult in the subtle world to detach themselves from the way of life they have loved until now. But they have no other choice. It will sometimes be difficult, even impossible, for them to accept the help of the beings of light and helpers who are sent to them, and to acknowledge that the life they have often led at the expense of others has disfigured their souls. Their souls are so burdened that they suddenly lack the energies they have always received from others, and they cannot replace them with anything. This is a sad and terrible state that can last a very long time until the soul realises that there is no other way than to recognise itself, its former wrong way of life and its remorse. Then the tormented soul would find healing. In eternity, there is no earthly time, and so the state of spiritual suffering can last for thousands of earthly years. You kind people, always remember that there is NO ANGER OF GOD and that he would never harbour thoughts of revenge. That is not possible. He was not created that way. He was created as a kind, loving, understanding and impersonal being. Unfortunately, God's gentle nature is portrayed by religious leaders as exactly the opposite. However, since all events and every human life are stored centrally in God, He knows all the connections, all the pains and sufferings of every human being and the soul that inhabits them, and can therefore, in His goodness and love, offer His help to correct the course of events, whether here on earth or in the hereafter. His offer of help will never end in a dead end of despair or spiritual suffering. Please take these words very seriously! It is human presumption to claim, as high church dignitaries, to preside over the faithful and act in the name of God or Christ. Throughout human history, this has led to much misery, suffering, despair and even acts of violence. The selfless nature of God cannot be learned in theological schools or other institutions of higher learning, nor can the depth of His being be fathomed. GOD IS ACCESSIBLE TO ALL PEOPLE, without exception. Dear people, death never comes at the push of a button, as many of you sometimes assume. This is understandable, because the process of dying is very often postponed to a distant future. Unfortunately, it is inevitable that the moment will come when the soul can no longer remain in its physical shell, for whatever reason. Please understand that the statement 'God has called him to Himself in His love and goodness' cannot be true. The beloved Deity does not call anyone to Himself! This is in no way consistent with His kind and loving nature. It pains the Deity in His deepest being when people have to end their lives on Earth, no matter how this happens. God supports life, builds life and sustains life. This will always be so as long as there are humans. However, it is tragic that a free soul in its light and splendour voluntarily takes on such a burden by incarnating into a physical body. This is truly not a normal process. It was never the will of our ancestors, nor was it the will of God.

The separation that took place at the time of the original creation caused much grief, tears and pain, for our ancestors knew in their infinite knowledge, acquired before creation, exactly what would happen and what the consequences would be when they used their concentrated primordial energies to create a material and visible creation through the Big Bang. What fascinates astronomers, physicists and scientists about the creation of the universe is in reality a unique tragedy of such magnitude that humans are still unable to comprehend its full depth in its entirety. The spirit of love understands humanity's desire for knowledge and its eternal search for clues. Unfortunately, this knowledge cannot be explained solely through physical and mathematical calculations, equations and theories. If the expansion of a person's consciousness is not given, if humility, modesty, equality and impersonality are not present in a person, it will be impossible for the human mind to fathom and understand creation as a whole, which is the origin of its existence.

It is truly a misconception of many religious leaders, priests and teachers to proclaim to their believers and followers the uniqueness of human beings from the supposed perspective of God, according to which they are the crowning glory of creation. This is not the case. Please understand this correctly. The divinity within me respects the will of all human beings and desires nothing but their well-being on Earth. But this is not the case, and the dear God cannot and must not change this sad reality. He must respect the will of human beings in all his decisions. This has been the case from the beginning. If he were to act differently, it would have a negative impact on the entire creation, and harmony, equality, purity and love among all heavenly beings would no longer be possible. This is the foundation of heavenly life; these are the principles and laws of heavenly life. The path of life for all human beings on this earth should consist of embracing these principles and laws of heavenly life. The sincere and deep desire should be to correct mistakes and refine and promote good character traits. Knowledge of the carefree heavenly life, the purity of all heavenly beings, the sincere desire to expand knowledge, the desire for new creations in harmony with ALL inhabitants of heaven should be the sincere desire of every human being. The desire of every human being should be to return to their heavenly home without detours. This return home never comes through self-imposed burdens or mortifications of any kind. Never has the beloved deity demanded that human beings lead a life of sacrifice behind monastery walls in order to be closer to her. The disappointment with such an earthly life will be great in the hereafter. Understand that all emotions and feelings experienced are stored in human cells. However, upon death, all this information is never lost. When a person dies, their cells are not simply dead and all stored information does not dissolve into nothingness. That does not happen. After the separation of body and soul, all stored information is transmitted to the soul via fine energy threads invisible to the naked eye, like tiny channels, and is thus not lost. This information is necessary for self-knowledge in the afterlife. The soul is not a mindless, wandering spirit.

At the moment of death, which can be observed particularly in palliative care, invisible processes take place that are necessary for the dying person. Everything that a person has stored in the cells of their body during their earthly life is reactivated, and the dying person must come to terms with it. This process can sometimes take several days, during which the dying person is no longer receptive and is in a state of agony, as their body can no longer absorb and convert energy because the cells now have a completely different function, namely to transfer the stored information to the higher consciousness. If they were reactivated to ensure the vital functions of the human organism, the body's cells would be blocked from performing this important task. It is usually very difficult for relatives and family members to watch the dying person go hungry and thirsty. However, consider these invisible processes as necessary. The intake of water and food would now be torture for the dying person. This must be avoided at all costs. The nursing staff caring for the dying person and, of course, the attending physicians are also called upon to help here. In recent years, it has become clear that nothing should be given to the body in this final phase. However, it is the task of the physicians and nursing staff to have clarifying discussions about this with those present. This will be a rewarding task.

But why do such processes take place? These are cleansing processes that make it easier for the soul to leave the dying body. Thanks to the information transmitted by the cells, the soul can orient itself in eternity. However, it will not always be easy to make sense of what has been experienced. Much weighs on the soul, which is burdened by a difficult way of life. Please understand that this message is not intended to be a burden or to cause fear. That is not the case. Rather, it is about awakening understanding in order to better comprehend these things.

It is understandable that restlessness may occur in the final phase, as the organism, which may be difficult to understand now, is working energetically at full speed. This can even lead to an increase in body temperature. It has always been assumed that this is a centralisation of blood circulation in order to maintain the vital functions of the organism. However, these processes of releasing stored subtle energy release an enormous amount of energy, which leads to an increase in body temperature. Can you imagine, my dear friends, what is going on in the body of a dying person before the soul can separate from the body? So do not worry if you observe these phenomena in dying people; it is a natural process of energy release that can cause these symptoms. However, the administration of appropriate medication can alleviate these symptoms.

Dear people and relatives of dying people, do not worry too much about how you can provide support. If you are silent companions and can understand these processes and respect their course, you have already achieved a great deal. Do not be surprised if it is no longer possible to communicate with the dying person at this stage. Please give the dying person the time they need for these processes to take place. It is not advisable to believe that the dying process must be accelerated or slowed down. Those present often ask God to end the suffering as quickly as possible. From a human perspective, this is perfectly understandable, but you must know that this is not torment, but a process of inner purification. Grant the dying person peace and avoid talking too much and discussing things among yourselves. These are certainly not rules that the spirit of love, God, would ever give, but they should help you to get through this time as well as possible and to respect and support the invisible processes that are taking place within. Grant the dying person the external peace that is necessary for the inner processes to take place. In doing so, you will have done a great deal of good! The moment of separation of body and soul, i.e. death as understood by humans according to their human concepts, occurs when the inner processes are complete and the soul is ready to leave its body. Advances in palliative medicine are now so far advanced that you can trust the attending physicians and nursing staff with regard to pain management and possible sedation. Such therapeutic measures are entirely appropriate and justified. They enable the body to find the peace necessary for the internal processes to run their course.

You now understand that the process of dying cannot simply be triggered at the push of a button, like turning a light on or off. It is a necessary process of maturation, purification and inner order.

In the love of God

Consciousness in duality, i.e. the female and male elements of the soul, completely permeated by light, the light body. Your soul will leap with joy and happiness, where there is no more sadness or sorrow, but only the loving union of our primordial ancestors, Christ, our primordial brother, and our beloved divinity, the spirit of love, in the original central sun of all light. Can you already imagine this in your mind? This is the deepest and most heartfelt desire of many benevolent and generous people who are searching. The joy of our spiritual brothers and sisters will be indescribable when they are reunited with you for all eternity.
